| APPELLATION |

Rancho Tierra Rejada, Spanish for “land of worked earth,” is the original name of the 2,500 acre Paso Robles ranch that is now home to the vineyards that produce Broken Earth and PULL Wines.

Planted in 1973, the Vineyard is the second oldest modern day vineyard in Paso Robles and was the first winery and vineyard to become 100% solar powered in the early 1990's. The commitment to sustainability and the history of Paso Robles can be found in every glass of PULL wines.
